

THE SPORTIER

www.thesportier.com

Yankees Pick Up Pitching

Andrew Miller, former Orioles and Red Sox reliever, has been picked up by the Yankees. The Yankees gave him a 4-year $36 Million contract. General manager Brian Cashman originally gave Miller a $32 Million dollars for 4 years, but then learned that there was another club giving an offer for $40 Million, so the Yankees gave $9 Million per year. Miller had left $4 Million dollars to play for the Yankees.

Source: ESPN

Matsuzaka in Japan

34 year old Former Mets and Red Sox Pitcher Daisuke Matsuzaka signed with the Softbank Hawks in Japan. His 2014 ERA was 3.89 with a 3-3 record and 78 strikeouts. "This is a very solid team," said Matsuzaka at a news conference. "I remember from my days in Japan how difficult they were to face. It should be a very enjoyable team to pitch for." In his MLB career, he had 132 starts, a 56-43 record and a 4.45 ERA.

Source: ESPN

In The Rulebook

What is the blue thing that referees throw on the ground? Well, you might think it has to do with penalties, but it doesn't. What a blue flag means is that the referees think that there is a change of possession, like a fumble or interception or something where the ball is given up by one team to the other.

The COMIC

By: Shailen Pathy

Hockey Funnies

Sources:

wepuckny.com
sportsfunny.com
reddit.com

Yale Stuns UConn At The End

On Friday, the Yale Bulldogs faced the defending champion UConn Huskies. This would be very hard for the Bulldogs to pull this off against a very great team. That was what any people probably thought. But in the first , Yale outscored UConn, 24-19. They were up few minutes, and then went down. UConn cam back and took a 44-43 lead at the last seconds. Ryan Boatright missed the free throw and UConn rebounded. The clock was ticking down. There was a pass under the basket, and it went out of bounds for a Yale ball. The ball went to different 3 point spots, but no one could shoot it. And then the ball comes to Jack Montague. He got the ball at the corner and shot with two defenders on him. IT'S IN!!!! Yale has defeated the defending champions, 45-44. The play wasn't designed for Montague. It was supposed to go to Justin Sears. But they still won. On November 30, there was a similar play in the UConn-Texas game, and the shot was in the same spot! The Bulldogs last won against UConn in 1986. This may have been the best victory in Yale history.

Source: Yale Bulldogs

What 2 Look 4

21-27

Prediction

VS.

Games Of Last Week

3-1

45-44

NCAA Basketball (Mens)

21-26

