

THE SPORTIER

Is Geno the fit for New York?

Geno Smith has improved over the past season. But now New York has got a powerful experienced QB on the bench, Michael Vick, and a more new QB with some learning to do, Geno Smith, who, for some reason, is starting. In the past few weeks Geno is 65-103 with 3 touchdowns, 731 yards, 84 rushing, and 2 fumbles, 4 interceptions and 6 sacks. Michael Vick, on the other hand, is a very experienced lefty with great running ability and passing ability and for some reason is on the bench.

NFL based team in London in 2020?

Mark Waller, the NFL's head of international divisions, predicts a London based team. 60% of players are not in agreement, according to 120 Sports. There would be 8 oversea trips for the London team, the rest for American teams.

Jeter's Final Game in the Bronx

Somehow, Derek Jeter's fantastic 20 season career has come to an end with a Thursday night final game in the Bronx. Jeter was 2-5, had 1 run and 3 RBI's.

It was as if the ninth inning was planned all along. It was 5-3 Yanks with one man on and 1 out. And of course, Adam Jones goes long with a 2 run homer. The score is 5-4. Next, Nelson Cruz strikes out swinging. That brings Steve Pearce to the dish, who had 20 homers. And right then, Steve has hit a Homerun. The next play is a fly out to Gardener to finish the half inning.

Now Derek Jeter is batting with pinch runner Antoan Richardson on second and an out. Jeter takes a swing. That swing was a history making swing. The ball gets past a diving Chris Davis and into shallow right field. Nick Markakis's throw to the plate is... Not in time!!!! Derek Jeter's last career hit at the stadium is a game winning RBI!!!! Yanks win, 5-6!!!

A Royal Celebration

2 outs in the Royals-White Sox game. Michael Taylor is batting. He makes some contact and the ball goes above the catchers head. The ball is coming down and... It's caught! The Kansas City Royals have clinched playoff berth since 1985!!!! 29 years of missing out on the postseason and finally they clinch.

1985

2014

29 years later

Larry Who?

Eli Manning has a new favorite target. Larry Donnell, the new Giants tight end, is a 6'6" 25 year old Rising star that was an undrafted free agent by the Giants in 2012. Larry Donnell gained 54 yards with 3 touchdowns last game in Washington. He has only lost the ball once this season, which was in the win over Houston.

"I think when Larry Donnell started to come to fruition, and catch the ball well and make some plays for us, I think that's when things kind of shifted," Cruz said Friday on a conference call with reporters. "It was definitely something that we needed to happen -- someone to step up and make some big plays, and Larry's done that for us," Giants all-star receiver Victor Cruz on Tight End Larry Donnell.

