

THE SPORTIER

Tim Tebow Gets Cut

Tim Tebow, who was recently signed by the Eagles after taking the past 2 years off, was cut by the Eagles. It looked like the Eagles were going to put Tim Tebow as their 3rd string quarterback, behind starter Sam Bradford and 2nd string Mark Sanchez. After getting cut, The Eagles will only have 2 quarterbacks, Bradford and Sanchez. At the end of the preseason, Tebow had 2 passing touchdowns in 286 passing yards, and 82 rushing yards with 1 rushing touchdown. Tebow played all 4 games and was expected to be on the roster for 2015, but the Eagles decided otherwise.

Source: NFL

The Comic

By: Shailen Pathy

THE COMIC

How Many No-Hitters?

.....

This year, there have been 6 no-hitters. That is A LOT. It all started in New York, where Giants rookie Chris Heston threw a no-hitter on the road. He is the 22nd rookie to throw a no-hitter. Then, we go to Washington D.C, where Max Scherzer threw a no-hitter, showing that he belongs with the Nationals after coming from Detroit. We hit Chicago where Phillie pitcher Cole Hamels, who is now on the Rangers, throws a no-hitter. Then, we go to Seattle where Hisashi Iwakuma threw a no-hitter for the Seattle Mariners. After that, we go to Houston where Astros pitcher Mike Fiers, who came from the Brewers at the trade deadline, throws a no-hitter, but some think that there was an illegal substance on his wrist. And the most recent is in Chicago, but this time, it was for Chicago, as Jake Arrieta tossed a no-hitter. The record in 1 season is 7, so lets see what happens.

Did You Know?

The rule for pine tar on a baseball bat has been 18 inches. The pine tar helps you grip the bat. You may have heard of pine tar being used by pitchers, which makes the ball move funny, but that's illegal. One game, back in the 1980's, George Brett hit a go ahead home run against the Yankees. The Yankees manager came out and said he George Brett had too much pine tar on his bat. That was after he hit the home run. Now, the rule is that if the umpire is told before the at bat or hit, that the umpire will ask you to clean the bat or get a new one. If he's told after the hit, than the hit still counts.

George Brett's Bat

Comic Sources:

Blog.trb.com
Funnystack.com
www.glitters20.com
giphy.com
www.appszoom.com