

THE SPORTIER

MLB Offseason

Now that the 2015 MLB season has officially ended, free agents will start to get signed. Let's take a look at some of the big players available.

Name	Position(s)	Team Released From
Ben Zobrist	INF/OF	KC Royals
Daniel Murphy	INF	NY Mets
Chase Utley	INF	LA Dodgers
Yoenis Cespedes	OF	NY Mets
Alex Gordon	OF	KC Royals
Colby Rasmus	OF	HOU Astros
Dexter Fowler	OF	CHI Cubs
Jason Hayward	OF	STL Cardinals
David Price	SP	TOR Blue Jays
Zack Grenkie	SP	LA Dodgers

Source: MLB Trade Rumors

Patriots, Panthers, Bengals or Broncos?

As the NFL season progresses, some teams just won't fall down. Those teams are the Patriots, Panthers, Bengals and Broncos. The one thing that all of those teams have in common is that they are undefeated. The Patriots have not faced very good teams and in some games, they almost lost, like when they faced the Steelers in the first game of the year, and they won by only 7. The Panthers faced better teams, like this week against the Packers, but otherwise, they haven't faced good teams, and they too almost lost, like when they played the Colts and they won by 3 in overtime. The Bengals haven't faced good teams, but they still made their games more intense than they had to, like when the barley defeated the Seahawks by 3 in overtime. The Broncos have faced 1 good team in the Packers, but besides that, there weren't any other teams that they couldn't beat. The Broncos had 2 close games, though, where they won once in overtime, against the Vikings and against the Browns. These teams have shown that they can win, but what happens when they face each other? Who will come out victorious?

Sources: Patriots, Panthers, Bengals, Broncos