Schwarber Down

On Thursday night, Chicago Cubs left fielder Kyle Schwarber tore his ACL and LCL while colliding with teammate and center fielder Dexter Fowler. When Fowler hit Schwarber, Schwarber went flying and ended up turning his knee in such a way that he tore ligaments in his knee. Fowler hit Schwarber in the leg while running towards the ball. Luckily, the Cubs didn't lose two to the accident, as Fowler was able to come out unharmed. Schwarber is going to have to sit out the whole rest of the year, which hurts the Cubs since Schwarber has a big bat in their lineup. Schwarber's backup is Matt Szczur. Szczur has experience in the Majors, as he played last year. Hopefully for the Cubs, Schwarber will be good enough to play next year on Opening Day.

Jets Get Clady

On Saturday, the New York Jets closed a deal with the Denver Broncos. The Broncos traded away 4-time Pro Bowler offensive tackle Ryan Clady in exchange for a 5th round draft pick. The Jets' offensive tackle, D'Brickshaw Ferguson, retired. Ferguson was 32 and expected to play a few more solid seasons. Ferguson protected Jets quarterbacks for 10 years. Ferguson never missed a game due to an injury. Ferguson was a 3-time Pro Bowler, one short of the player taking his place, Ryan Clady. Clady has played for the Broncos for 7 years, appearing in 2 Super Bowls, winning Super Bowl 50. Clady has signed a contract for $7 million and a club option for 2017. The Jets are now starting their rebuilding period.
