

THE SPORTIER

Peyton Surpasses Favre

Peyton Manning is an all-star QB, we all know that. He set many records last year, including the single season passing yards record and many more. But Sunday Night was the night that Peyton set a record that may never be broken: The career TD record. It was the 2nd quarter and Denver is in the red zone and Peyton throws... It's a TOUCHDOWN!!!! Peyton Manning broke the all-time TD record!! Later he would add another touchdown to make it even higher.

Messi vs. Ronaldo

On Saturday, we saw Madrid beat Barcelona, 3-1. Lionel Messi did not score, but captain of Real Madrid Cristiano Ronaldo made a goal on a penalty at 35'. These two teams will play again in the El Clásico on Sunday the 22 in March of 2015. But for now, Ronaldo has an edge for the next match-up in Barcelona.

Source: ESPNFC.com

In The Rulebook

What is an illegal shift? Well, an illegal shift is a penalty that can only be called on the offense. It is when a player, say, wide receiver, isn't set when the ball is snapped.

Source: sportingcharts.com

Peyton Breaks TD

Royals Rally, Giants Dominate

In the 3rd inning, the Royals had a rally. It started with Alex Gordon on first with two outs. Lorenzo Cain hits a soft ground ball to Shortstop Brandon Crawford and lunges for first and gets a single. Eric Hosmer gets a ground ball towards the first baseman, Brandon Belt, and barley beats the throw to the pitcher at first. Kansas City gets through their whole order and scores 4. And then innings 5 and 7 change everything. Joe Panik scores on a single from Hunter Pence. The bases get loaded and then a sac fly comes from Juan Perez. It's 4-4. In the 6th they scored 3 runs. The 7th inning was insane. It started with a single from Brandon Crawford. From then on to the end of the 7th, the kept scoring and scoring. They had lots of hits to the outfield. At the end of the inning, the score was 4-11. That score held on to be the winning score for the Giants to tie the series up at 2-2.

Source: MLB.com

1:00

SNF

MN

8:07

8:30

Saturday Finales

1-

4-

7-1

